DALY CITY SCHOOL BONDS SHOULD BE APPROVED

School Board Sets Election Date For Friday October 5

Drawings of Tentative Plans Expected to Be Displayed Prominently in Business Section of Daly City

The date for the school bond election for the purpose of securing funds for the construction of the three proposed elementary schools has been set for Friday, October 5.

This action was taken officially at a meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Jefferson School District held last evening.

A telegram has been sent to Washington to secure data as to the form of the bonds to be voted on at that time, as the same must conform to the federal PWA requirements. A reply to this wire is expected today.

The new buildings proposed to be erected in place of the present old structures are the Jefferson, Vista Grande and Crocker Schools.

Tentative relief plans for the buildings have been drawn by the architects and it is contemplated these will be put on display at some prominent place in the center of the business district of Daly City at a date in the near future.

The action of the Board of Trustees will put the decision as to erection of the new school buildings directly up to the electors of the district. To carry the bond issue will require two-thirds of all votes cast at the election.

There should be no hesitancy on the part of the residents to cast an affirmative ballot for the proposed issue, as the new structures are sorely needed to replace the old schools, which are placed by many in the hazardous class.

The old structures have loong been obsolete and should be replaced by modern ones as soon as possible.

The youth of today are entitled to proper care while pursuing their efforts in the search of education, and should receive every assistance that can be given. They constitute our coming citizens of tomorrow, and it behooves all who have the interests of the community at heart to see to it that the best possible housing is provided for them during their study periods.

In addition to the necessity from a student standpoint is the consideration that the work of erection of these schools will give considerable employment to an appreciable number of Daly City residents for an extended period of time at remunerative wages.

Every public spirited citizen eligible to vote should cast a ballot in favor of the school bonds.

GIANNINI VISIONS BRIGHT FUTURE

In an interview, the other day, A. P. Giannini, chairman of the board, Bank of America, and Transamerica Corporation, said:

In order to get this country on a prosperous basis, it is necessary to have adequate employment, good food, satisfactory housing and old age provision for its people, the federal housing act is a step in the right direction."

A new day in banking is dawning, he believes, with bankers to meet professional standards and therefore prohibited from the practices which led to unsound conditions in the country in the past.

In the same trend, a new economic era is at hand, he optimistically reported, with business improving in the fall regardless of any seasonal setbacks in the interim.

HORSE AND BUGGY AND AUTO CRASH

Mrs. Josephine Lack of Rockaway Beach sustained severe injuries last Friday evening when her horse and wagon was struck from the rear by an automobile driven by Henry Woolen of 1046 West Forty-sixth street, Los Angeles.

The accident occurred at Mission and Vale streets at about 11 oclock while Mrs. Lack was traveling to her home south of the city.

The injured woman was removed to the Villa Sanitarium for treatment.

Woolen was cited on a charge of reckless driving. He will have a hearing in police court today.

BOOM COMMITTEE FOR BOND ISSUE IS ORGANNIZED

Publicity Committee Named For Purpose of Assisting Passage by Electors

Another meeting was held Wednesday evening of this week of representative citizens who are seeking to advance by all possible means the passage of the proposed new school bonds issue to be voted on October 5 by the electors of the Jefferson School District. The meeting was presided over by George Augustien, president of the Board of Trustees of the district.

All the Parent Teacher Units of the various schools of the city were represented, as were also the American Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the Daly City Volunteer Fire Department. The American Legion and the Volunteer Fire Department have taken official action endorsing adoption of the bonds.

Mayor H. H. Smith and Councilman Julius Twesten spoke in favor of passage of the bond issue. Their remarks were supplemented by a talk by Assistant Fire Chief Andrew J. Chesney, who addressed himself to the subject of the dangerous condition of the present school buildings and what might occur in case of failure to vote favorably for the bonds.

Mrs. Lillian Landini suggested that a questionnaire circular be printed and circulated containing general information regarding the bond issue. Miss Leonetti, a teacher in the public schools, suggested that some of these circulars be printed in Italian, so as to enlighten those citizens of that nationality who might not be thoroughly conversant with the subject of bond issues and impressing on them the importance of casting a favorable ballot on this matter.

Many ways and means for making the bond proposition clear and bring it to the attention of every voter of the Jefferson School District were brought forward by those present.

W. E. Pitschke and E. J. Halcrow were named as publicity committee chairmen.

It is proposed to secure pictures of the proposed new school buildings to be printed in the newspapers.

Mrs. Chesney spoke in favor of the employment of local men on this work and said the contract between the government and the voters should provide therefor.

Meetings will be held weekly under the requirements of the contract and much good is expected to come from these gatherings as more citizens respond and assist in the work. A few energetic citizens should not be expected to carry the entire burden, so let every person who has at heart the welfare of the children and the progress of the community come out and perform a duty that should be a pleasure as well.

Don't forget to be present at the next meeting on Wednesday evening, September 5, in the new Manual Arts Annex to the Woodrow Wilson School building.

MRS. LANDINI HAS BIRTHDAY PARTY

Mrs. Lillian Landini of Winchester street delightfully entertained a large group of friends, at her home Monday, at an afternoon of whist and bridge, the occasion being the celebration of her birthday.

After the game, tempting refreshments were served to the following guests:

A QUEEN MAKES LOVE

Helen Gahagan (Queen Mary) entreats Ian Keith (Lord Bothwell) to give up all for the glory of their love in "Mary of Scotland." This great drama is now at the Curran Theater in San Francisco, with Miss Gahagan, Mr. Keith, Violet Kemble Cooper and a company of thirty players.

SILVER REHABILITATION MEANS RAPID PROGRESS

By J. W. MARCHBANK
(Pioneer in Frontier Mining Work)

Ramifications of the effect of the executive order nationalizing silver are wider than at first anticipated. An analysis of the situation ensuing since the federal government began to take over the silver stocks at a little more than 50 cents an ounce shows the move to have been one of the wisest in recent times.

With a bright prospect silver may go up to $1.29 an ounce as a consequence of the activity of the United States authorities, the big question at present is:

"What will Canada do for silver?"

There is a strong agitation up north for the Dominion to follow in the footsteps of President Roosevelt, but with a conservative government in power it is an uphill struggle. The silver proponents point out that with domestic producers of the white metal in this country receiving 64½ cents an ounce, with the United States government purchasing foreign silver at 50 cents and nationalizing its individually owned supply at 50 cents, it would be the logical thing for the Canadian government to do likewise.

Up to this time the northern officiols have contented themselves with setting the machinery in motion for the purchase of 1,600,000 ounces of silver annually in accordance with the terms of the London Conference agreement. The silverites contend that action is only like the proverbial "drop in the bucket." They want as much relief as is being accorded the industry on this side of the border.

The silver people ask:

"Why does not Canada raise the domestic price of silver to the United States level and thus remove from the relief rolls of British Columbia and elsewhere many thousand deserving and valuable citizens?"

It is set forth that dozens of small towns could be restored to prosperity in the mining regions with reasonable action for silver. Figures demonstrate that if Canada did pay 64½ cents an ounce for domestic silver, based upon the production of last year, the total outlay would be less than $2,250,000 annually, or 22½ cents for every man, woman and child in Canada.

United States Senator Key Pittman of Nevada recently made some pertinent remarks about the future of silver. He said:

"There is no question in my mind that silver will rise steadily to its parity in this country, which is $1.29 an ounce. It is estimated by the Treasury Department 1,300,000,000 ounces will be required to establish a metallic base of 75 per cent gold and 25 per cent silver for our currency.

"We all know there is not that much floating silver. In Nevada alone 100 mines and thirty mills have resumed operations and 4000 additional miners employed since the relief legislation was passed."

It is interesting to note that Vancouver is the mining center of the Pacific Coast. As Sidney Norman graphically recounts in his column in the Vancouver Sun, San Francisco, some years ago, "by the Golden Gate," had the right to the title and later on Spokane sprang into the lead.

Norman was down this way lately and on his return home expressed the opinion that there is more mine-mindedness in British Columbia than in all the western states to the south of that Canadian province put together.

Signs of the times, however, friend Norman, point to a great revival in both gold and silver mining in the West, under the encouragement of our broad-visioned President, and it may not be long before California and other states will be putting up a race for the honors with our Canadian cousins.

SCHOOL GROUNDS TO BE IMPROVED WITHOUT COST

Clearing and Grading Are Accomplished Through Relief Committee Aid

At no cost whatever to the taxpayers of the district, the grounds in the rear of the Jefferson Union High School are being completely transformed. The space that six months ago was sloping and covered with a heavy growth of weeds is being graded and terraced in sections to provide for tennis, basketball, and handball courts, and a field for baseball batting practice.

Also roads are being built through the grounds without cost to the district. The rock used in the construction is being supplied from the job at the top of the hill where the buildings are to be moved back for the widening of Mission Street. The Sibley Grading Company, which is the contractor on this job, donates the rock to the high school without charge either for material or hauling.

The labor on all of the work is being supplied through the San Mateo County Emergency Relief Committee with the approval of the State and Federal Emergency Relief Administration.

These developments are in keeping with the growth of the high school. Each year there is a large increase in attendance. The enrollment this year is more than 12 per cent over what it was last year, and in the past six years has more than doubled.

It is apparent, therefore, that the facilities of the school must be increased to keep pace with this growth in attendance. In no other department of the school has there been such need for added facilities as in physical education. The state law requires that every boy and girl be enrolled in this department throughout the entire high school course. In almost every other high school in California there are gymnasium facilities for the carrying on of this work. Jefferson has been trying to comply with State regulations through field sports, looking forward to the time when it would be possible to have a gymnasium building here. During rainy or otherwise inclement weather the work of the department is seriously interfered with, and often suspended altogether.

The High School Trustees during the past year have given much thought to this condition, and, through Principal James Ferguson, have been negotiating with the County, State and Federal Emergency Relief Administration concerning a Federal grant to the high school district. The trustees feel the urgent need for a gymnasium building and have been given encouragement in believing that the State and Federal authorities will donate to the district a sum equal to the entire labor cost of putting up a gymnasium if the district will bear the cost of supplying the needed materials and equipment.

Plans are already under way to have the matter given public consideration.

SILVER PURCHASE HELPS UNCLE SAM

In its new silver policy, a process similar to that indicated eventually for gold is being followed by the federal government.

The difference between the cost of the silver which the treasury is acquiring and its statutory value of $1.29 an ounce is being credited to ordinary receipts as rapidly as the silver is made the backing for new issues of silver certificates. Since June 30 the government's revenues have been increased by $32,559,006 in this way.

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau Jr. recently announced the treasury intends to apply its gold "profits" to reducing the national debt.

RESOLUTION FOR SUPERVISION OF PLAY IS ADOPTED BY CITY COUNCIL

Notice Received of Paving of Street Adjacent to Railway Tracks

In line with the decision reached some time ago by that body, the City Council on Monday evening adopted the following resolution with reference to providing for supervised play on the grounds of the elementary schools of Daly City, which has been under discussion for several months:

Resoved, by the City Council of the City of Daly City, State of California, that supervised play and recreation shall be provided in said city for children of Daly City of grammar school age, on each Saturday of every calendar month, commencing September 1, 1934, and continuing thereafter for the months of September, October and November, 1934, or for such further time as the City Council by resolution shall direct. Such recreation shall be coonducted on the playgrounds of the schools in Daly City of the Jefferson Grammar School District.

Be it further resolved, that an advisory committee composed of five citizens of Daly City shall be appointed by said City Council to advise with said City Council and the two supervisors of play hereinafter mentioned, as to the activities to be engaged in in such recreation, and also to designate the play grounds of the schools to be used for such purpose.

Be it further resolved, that two supervisors of play shall be appointed from time to time to have charge of such recreational activities of said children within said city at a salary not to exceed Five Dollars each, for every Saturday upon which such supervisors shall act, to be paid semi-monthly.

This resolution was adopted by the unanimous vote of the members of the council. On roll call Councilmen Selmi, Sundermann Twesten, Fahy and Smith all voted in the affirmative.

A letter was read from the Board of Trustees of the Jefferson School District, granting permission for use of the grammar school grounds for supervised play for the children of Daly City, as formerly requested by the council.

A communication was addressed to the council by the Southern Pacific Railway stating that completion of the paving of Washington street adjacent to the railway property would be completed this week.

The council made provision for installation of a new street light at the corner of Woodrow street and Citrus avenue.

After transacting routine business the council adjourned.

BATHERS WANT WARNING SIGNS

A plea that warning signs be posted along the San Gregorio Beach in San Mateo County to keep bathers out of the water has been made by Miss Annette McGee, 23, Berkeley. Miss McGee narrowly escaped death Sunday when William Turner, Richmond, was drowned off the beach.

Miss McGee was caught in the treacherous undertow and Turner, employe of a motor plant, went to her help. The girl reached the beach in safety but Turner was swept out to sea.

Miss McGee is secretary for the claims division of the Pacific Gas and Electric Company of Berkeley. She is noted as an exceptionally strong swimmer.

She points out that there are a number of dangerous spots in this vicinity and that the signs may be the cause of saving lives of bathers.

Vandals Wreck Store

The notion store conducted by Mrs. Mary Hensley at 6736 Mission street was broken into during Sunday night and robbed of a quantity of cigars, soda water and school supplies.

The interior of the store was completely wrecked.

The marauders gained entrance by breaking open the back door.

This same store was broken into and robbed only three weeks ago.

JEFFERSON UNION HIGH SCHOOL P.-T. A. HOLD FIRST MEETING

The Parent Teachers Association of Jefferson Union High School met Tuesday evening, August 21, in "The Little Theater" of the school for its first meeting of the year. The community singing was led by the new director of music, Mr. Stevens.

After the usual opening procedure, the president ,Mrs. Bentley, presented the names of the committee chairmen appointed thus far. They are: Membership, Mrs. R. L. Crane; Hospitality, Mrs. R. Smith; Publications and Emblems, Mrs. M. Dunn; Program, Mrs. L. A. Prestidge; Assistant Publicity, Miss Edna Smith; Student Aid, Mr. James Ferguson; Founder's Day, Mrs. J. E. Walker; Art and Poster, Mrs. H. Paterson; Citizenship, Mr. Clive Saiz; Legislation, Mr. Hugh Paterson.

The association adopted as its objective for the year: "To arouse the interest of the community in the problems of our youth." Our program will be planned for the coming year with this thought in mind.

The unit decided to assist the student welfare shops of the district by having a "bundle drive" the first week in September. Members, friends and students are requested to send or bring clothing that can be repaired or made over to the High School.

Mr. Ferguson spoke briefly on the objective chosen for the year.

The business meeting was followed by a delightful social hour in the domestic science room.

Tentative plans for the September meeting include a program of special interest to new members and parents of new students. A cordial invitation is extended to all interested in the youth of our community.

The next regular meeting of the executive board will be held Tuesday, September 11, at 2:30 in the afternoon at the High School.

MINING NOTES OF VARIOUS SECTIONS

The Kentucky Ridge Mine in the Kentucky Flat section, seven miles west of Grass Valley, is beoing rehabilitated by a small crew of men under the direction of H. D. Quimby, the superintendent. The mine was a notable producer in the early days of California before the Civil War, and gained repute through Colonel W. E. English, a Southern slave owner, who brought Negroes from Kentucky to work the mine. Colonel English was killed during the early '50s. It was belived he met his death at the hands of highwaymen, who robbed him of a large sum of gold from the mine.

The Gold Ace Mine near Cararra Nevada, has been optioned by Ex-President Herbert Hoover and associates from the Gibralter Mining Company. The mine has been under developement by the Gibralter Mining Company about four years, and a fifty-ton mill is in operation. The new control plans erection of a plant with a daily capacity of 150 tons, provided further developements and sampling prove satisfactory. The Gold Ace attracted wide attention several years ago, when high-grade was found near the surface by Pat Shae and partners.

Discovery of a new vein in the old Jumper Mine, near Stent, is reported. Prospecting of virgin ground started recently in the mine, which has been idle many years, and the new strike was made about eighty feet from the old workings. The ledge parallels the main vein-system and is said to be apparently developing into an important orebody, but considerable work must be done to determine its extent The Jumper for many years ranked among the leading producers on the Mother Lode and is credited with a yield of $11,000,000.

Bureau of Statistics of Canada, has issued a bulletin showing the production of metals during the first five months of this year, and comparison with the previous year, as follows: 1933, Gold—1,201,274 ozs: silver, 6,504,279 ozs: copper, 102,657,012 lbs. lead, 108,097,211 lbs: nickle, 14,666,635: zinc, 67,690,746. 1934, Gold—1,191,097ozs: silver, 6,263,979; copper 149,282,704 lbs. lead, 129,065,958 lbs. nickle, 49,932,038 lbs. zinc, 115,837,355 lbs.

Honored at Stork Shower

Mrs .A. Cameron of Westlake avenue was guest of honor, Monday evening, at a stork shower given by Mrs. H. Hutchings Sr. and Miss Evelyn Lowden at the home of Miss Lowden on Brunswick street.

Mrs. Cameron received a number of pretty and useful gifts.

The table was prettily decorated in pink and white, and had as a center piece a little cradle made of pink crepe paper and containing five little dolls. A stork was perched on the top of the bed and carried another doll in its mouth.

Those who enjoyed the delightful evening were Mesdames A. Lahey, C. Lahey, J. Gerrans, T. Lowden, W. Loomis, H. Hutchings Jr., J. Larsen, F. Larsen, T. Duarte, R. Perata, A. Cameron, H. Hutchings Sr., E. Lowden, H. Loomis, D. Bernzott, M. Bernzott and J. Dillon.

STATE FAIR TO SHOW UPTREND IN CALIFORNIA

Exhibits Give Visible Signs Evidencing Big Business Improvement Past Year

California's eightieth annual State Fair, throwing open its doors on Saturday, September 1, for ten crowded days and nights of festivities, will give visible evidence of a marked improvement during the year in every major interest in the state.

Increased entry lists, greater diversity of exhibits, entry of new counties and participation for the first time of a large number of out of state livestock and industral organizations all give concrete proof of an upturn.

Entry increases have resulted in many last minute changes and in some instancse building additions to accomodate the flood of exhibits.

Draft horse entries, for instance, are 80 per cent heavier than in 1933, requiring the hurried erection of extra barns. Swine entries have gone up 40 per cent, with some breeds represented by two and three times the number of animals showing last year.

Sheep entries have jumped 20 per cent, largely through the coming of many selections from Oregon and Canadian herds. Future Farmer and 4-H Club livestock entries are also averaging a 20 per cent increase.

On its cultural side, the 1934 State Fair also reflects this improved condition. A 25 per cent increase in school exhibits has already crowded to the doors the new semipermanent Education Building. A 20 per cent increase in displays in the Woman's Building has necessitated a remodeling and the 21 per cent increase in art entries has put space in the art gallery at a premium.

True to its tradition of having "something doing every minute," the Fair program will begin to hum the moment Governor Frank F. Merriam opens the gates at 9 oclock on Saturday morning.

Thousands of children will take possession of the grounds, for this will be their day, with all youngsters under 15 admitted free. Editors of the state will meet at noon for the annual California Press Day luncheon which will be addressed by Governor Merriam and President Maitland R. Henry of the California Newspaper Publishers' Association.

At 1:30 the season's racing program will open with running of the famous Occident Trotting Stake, begun in 1873 by Governor Leland Stanford. This will be followed by the free-for-all trot and the 2:14 pace, and the program will conclude with four flashy running races.

A thunder of skyrockets will open the evening grandstand revue at 7:30, followed by a gorgeous eight hundred foot fireworks battle pageant. The Don Lee Columbia "Merrymakers" will follow at 8 o'clock with a coast-wide broadcast. The classic State Fair Horse Show will open its program at 8:15.

Bands, drum corps and bugle corps of the American Legion will take over the grounds on Sunday, September 2. No racing will be held on this day.

Other events to follow are Labor Day on Monday, "Dobbsie" Day on Tuesday; Wine, Mining and Grange Day on Wednesday, and Governor's Day on Thursday. The Native Sons and Daughters Admission Day celebration will end the Fair on September 8, 9 and 10.

WONDER WHO WON?

When her fiance failed to appear for their wedding, Miss Elizabeth Marion of Glasgow married his brother, who was to have acted as best man at the ceremony.

LARGEST VOTE IS CAST FOR McGRATH

Sheriff James J. McGrath led the field at the Primary election for the office he holds at present, with Police Chief John J. Harper of Burlingame second, and Police Chief J. Ed Farrell of Atherto, a write-in candidate, third. According to the count Tuesday, McGrath had a majority of all ballotts cast and was thereby elected for another four years.

Supporters of Chief Farrell are reported to be planning a possible contest on the face of the returns. The contest would be based on the assertion that election boards in numerous precincts refused to count Farrell votes because his name did not have stamp checks or crosses beside it on the ballots. This, Farrell supporters said resulted from the fact that votrs were given cards bearing Farrell's signature on one side and carbon paper on the other, with instructions merely to trace the signiture on the ballots.

The count for sheriff:

John J. Harper, 8224; James J. McGrath, 15,049; Scott Smith, 687; Harry Arnold, 772; C. A. Callahan, 741; J. E. Farrell, 2929.

For district attorney: Gilbert Farrell, 7477; and Edward Hoffman, 6092, will compete in the November election.

County Clerk Elmore B. Hinman was re-elected when he polled 18,045 votes over his opponent, Gene Cerqui, who received 8039.

County Controller Edward Stack was re-elected with 15,407 votes, as against Joseph Beard's 5512, and Edward Pollock's 3474.

County Assessor Dan Flynn won with 15,014 votes, as against 5644 for Jules Smith.

In District No. 2, for supervisor, Mrs. Rosalie Brown, who has held the office for fourteen years, tallied 6073 votes and Fred Beer received 12,742. She and -Beer will fight it out at the November election because enough votes were tallied by Candidates John Forsythe, 5309, and John Cowgill, 1868, to make a runoff necessary for this office.

In District No. 5 Dr. C. V. Thompson, incumbent, who is chairman of the board at present and a member for nineteen years, will have to contest at the November election with City Councilman Walter High of Burlingame. High received 11,181 votes and Dr. Thompson tallied 8651.

Frederick Peterson was elected to the Assembly and John J. McGrath will retain his seat as congressman.

The Redwood City harbor project failed to carry.

Granddaughter Christened

Barbara Jean Hesselien, the three months old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hesselien of San Francisco and the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Hesselien of Woodrow street, was christened, Sunday morning at 11 o'clock at St. John's Lutheran Church in San Francisco.

Mr. John G. Hesselien was the godfather and Mrs. Ida Dixon and Mrs. Myrtle Mullin were the godmothers.

Following the christening, a reception for little Barbara Jean and a birthday party for Master Robert Mullin, who celebrated his ninth birthday, was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hesselien.

Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Mullin and son Robert Jr., Mr. and Mrs. H. Nelson, Mr. and Mrs. J. Hesselien Sr., Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hesselien, Mrs. Ida Dixon, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Green, Mrs. M. Mullin, Deane Nelson, Joseph Nelson and Melba Nelson.

What has become of the old-fashioned folks who didn't want their pictures in the paper?

Another paradox is that light-weight politicians sling the heaviest chunks of mud.

NEW YORKER PLEASED WITH BREMER MINE

Entire District Stimulated Through Development of Northern Property

M. E. Erdofy, mining engineer and investment banker of New York who recently made an inspection trip to the property of the Bremner Gold Mining Company near McCarthy, Alaska, on his return expressed himself as highly enthusiastic over the possibilities of the property.

"Bremner has excellent showings," he said, "considering the amount of underground work which it has been possibe to complete by the slow hand methods which have hitherto been used. Now that the hydro-electric plant which will furnish 185 horsepower is completed and turning out juice and the 600-foot Gardner-Denver compressor is installed rapid development is certain to follow. In fact, I am informed that they are now averaging ten feet per day in the drift tunnel which is being driven on the Grand Prize Vein. This vein is exposed on the surface for a distance of more than 1500 feet. Rich ore was exposed on the surface approximately 150 feet ahead of the present face of the tunnel and approximately four feet of backs are being made with each five feet of tunnel. In view of the width of this vein, which was 13 feet at the portal, it can readily be seen that ore is being made very rapidly. Late advices from Peyton Ramer, President of the company state that the tunnel is in a full face of ore.

"All geologic indications point to persistence to considerable depth. the tonnage now blocked out will prob- Values run from $12.00 to $250, while ably run approximately $40 per ton. Considering the free-milling character of the ore and the rapid developement which is now possible the property appears to hold great promise not only for its own possibilities but because it will encourage the developement of other properties which may result in the opening up of another important mining district for the Territory of Alaska."

MIGHT BE DEAF AND DUMB

What appears to be a record for domestic felicity is reported from Chicago, where Mr. and Mrs. William Halket, aged 90 and 89, respectively, have completed sixty-seven years of married life without having had a quarrel. They reared ten children in that time. Halket still writes poetry to his wife, which might cause a cynic to wonder whether their compatibility has persisted because of or in spite of the poetry.

Bert Connor, 17-year-old Houston boy, who saved two girls from drowning, is in line for citation for bravery by the Carnegie Foundation as a result.

FROGS' LEGS ARE TASTY DELICACY

Expert Gives Some Methods of Serving Them.

By EDITH M. BARBER

THIRTY million frogs' legs are annually consumed in Greater New York, reads a news note in the paper. Do you use them in your household? Do you order them at restaurants? Personally, I am very fond of this delicacy, but I do not associate it particularly with New York. I associate them with an exciting hunt by night, when we followed the bank of a stream by the light of a lantern which was designed to show us our way and to attract or blind—I forget which—the game which was scarcely given a fair chance before it was speared. In Michigan I have often been asked to share the "catch" of a midnight hunter and have furnished the recipe for the preparation by the hunters themselves of the tiny tender legs which we picked by the dozen. "Pick" is the word in connection with frogs' legs, which are much bone and ltitle meat—much work, but well repaid by flavor and tenderness.

Although Chicago, according to the news notes, eats only half as many frogs' legs, they seem to appear more often on menus out there. Once upon a time real 100 per cent Americans scorned this delicate food. The term "frog-eaters," given to the Frenchmen by someone, was meant to be opprobrious. While there are always persons who admit to a food prejudice by insisting that they could never eat frog legs, anyone who has tasted them is at once a convert to their delicacy of flavor which is rather like that of chicken and of its tenderness.

I looked through a dozen or more of my collection of cook books and found that a number of them do not mention the preparation of the food at all. As a food, it is perhaps the only one omitted from the encyclopedia of food. In the standard cook books, one, or, at the most, two recipes for preparation are given. In one of my foreign books there are several recipes. There are two, perhaps three, attractive ways of cooking them. The commonest is to dip them in egg and crumbs and to fry them in deep fat. I prefer them dipped in seasoned flour and sauted in butter. The other method can have many variations—the legs are boiled in salted water until tender, drained and served with a sauce which is usually a rich one made with eggs and cream. They are often seasoned with lemon juice; sometimes with tomato juice. Mushrooms are sometimes combined with frogs' legs, and one foreign recipe calls for cooking them with oysters, seasoned with tarragon; another suggests oysters and crabs, which are, of course, a luxury in New York. Another delicate way of serving them—I initiated myself to celebrate the gift of a "Mess" of frogs' legs; I sauted them in butter and then added lemon juice, a dash of anchovy paste and sprinkled them with grated parmesan cheese, and very good they were.

Fried Frogs' Legs.

Wipe frogs' legs and sprinkle with salt and pepper, dip in crumbs, egg and crumbs again and fry three minutes in deep fat and drain.

Frogs' Legs and Mushrooms.

12 pairs frogs' legs, salt and pepper to taste
3 tablespoons lemon juice
½ pound mushrooms
½ cup water
1 tablespoon butter
1 tablespoon flour
½ cup tomato juice
2 eggs
½ cup cream

Wipe the legs, put them in a bowl with salt, pepper and lemon juice over them. Let soak half an hour. Add the mushrooms sliced and a half cup of water. Melt butter and flour and stir over fire until smooth. When blended stir in the tomato juice. Add this mixture to the beaten eggs; add cream, and pour over frogs' legs and cook ten to fifteen minutes until tender.

Sauted Frogs' Legs.

Wipe frogs' legs, dredge with seasoned flour and saute in butter until brown on all sides. Add one-fourth cup of butter and two tablespoons of lemon juice and heat. Sprinkle with minced parsley.

Frogs' Legs With Parmesan Cheese.

Saute frogs' legs in butter. Add one teaspoon anchovy paste to one-half cup of butter and cream well. Spread over frogs' legs, and when on platter ready to serve, sprinkle with grated Parmesan cheese.

Canada Can Supply World Demand for Platinum Ore

Ottawa, Can.—Canada is now capable of supplying the world demand for platinum and its allied metals, according to a report issued by the Canadian department of mines. Cost of production of platinum and related metals in Canada is at present well below that of most producing countries. Canadian nickel mines, according to official statement, are capable of contributing 300,000 ounces of these metals annually, which compares with the present world rate of consumption of approximately 200,000 ounces. The Sudbury district is the chief source of the metals in the empire, and the output from its mines places Canada next to Russia among world producers.

It is almost a certainty that additional discoveries of platiniferous nickel-copper sulphides of the Sudbury type will be made in Canada, states the report.

Lucky Prize Was Unlucky for Negro

Decatur, Ala.—A one hundred and two year old ten-cent piece, a luck token to its owner, brought great misfortune in the form of a 99-year jail sentence to Willie Shaw, negro, in the Circuit court here.

Two negroes robbed C. P. Madry of his purse, which contained $25. In reporting his loss to police, Madry mentioned small change including a dime made in 1832, which he carried for luck.

When police found a dime of the same date among possessions of a negro woman, they questioned her on the theory that few dimes of that age still should be in circulation. The woman recalled Shaw had given her the dime. He readily admitted guilt and named an accomplice when confronted with the evidence.

HOW IT STARTED

By JEAN NEWTON

In the Twinkling of an Eye

HERE is a phrase that would seem to be of modern inspiration. When we say "in the twinkling of an eye" we conjure up a picture of modern speed. And we take this combination of words for granted, we have used them so long, without stopping to note that eyes do not twinkle, and that therefore the phrase must have a history.

That history starts in the New Testament, where, in Corinthians, in the fifteenth chapter, the implications of the Resurrection are discussed. We find:

51. "Behold, I shew you a mystery; we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed.

52. "In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump; for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed."

Costly Hospital Idle 5 Years, Awaits Doctor

Pergamino (Argentina). — Pergaminoites are demanding doctors and insisting that the city government do something about it.

Five years ago the city completed an elaborate modern hospital, at a cost of 4,000,000 pesos. It has 380 beds, none of which has accommodated a patient; a magnificent surgery where no operations have been performed; a laboratory where no experiments have been carried out; and spacious gardens, now covered with weeds.

A sudden political change took place and no staff was appointed. No part of the hospital has been used.

Hot Weather Angers Bees and They Go on Strike

Kenton, Ohio.—A half million bees here have gone on strike because of the heat. They attacked keepers, refused to toil, and resorted to sabotage. They attacked melting hives and toppled them to the earth.

W. A. Shadley, Hardin county farmer, said that the bees in his 15 colonies were on a rampage. A hundred thousand toilers, it seems, perished in their own honey when it melted and drowned them. Resisting all efforts at arbitration, the bees in the Shadley colonies were 100 per cent drones.

Use of Word "Dumb"

The use of dumb, meaning "stupid," is an Americanism, despite the fact that, derived from Anglo-Saxon, the word originally meant "stupid." Later it received the meaning of "inarticulateness, or, lacking in clearness," and in English these became, and are still, the meanings attached to the word. The usage in the United States is probably influenced by the German dumm, meaning "dull, stupid."—Literary Digest.

TRUE DETECTIVE STORY

by Vance Wynn © Public Ledger

The Man Who Fell Through the Earth

JOHN O'CONNOR, a gauger, going to his place of employment, was seen crossing London bridge one morning, but after that disappeared as completely as though he had fallen through the earth.

What added to the mystery was the fact that O'Connor was very well known along the London docks.

He was an expert in his line and never without a job.

That such a man could drop out of sight without leaving a single trace behind him seemed to be incredible.

Yet the records of the police department show that thousands of men and women disappear every year and are never heard of afterward.

The authorities in the course of their investigation made a tour of all the hospitals and morgues, but without success.

The case became famous, and it was generally referred to as the mystery of the man who fell through the earth.

Inspector Fox was designated by Scotland Yard to follow up the investigation, and he plunged into it with a great deal of enthusiasm.

His colleagues taunted him with the hopelessness of the quest, saying that nothing would ever come of it, but Fox was not discouraged in the least.

He determined to use his brains as well as his feet.

So, after reviewing the whole affair in his mind, he put to himself this query:

"Who was the woman in the case?"

Then he proceeded to answer it by personal investigations along this line.

He learned that in his younger days O'Connor was looked upon as a good "catch" among the ladies.

In the course of his inquiries, the detective found that O'Connor had been smitten with a pretty Swiss girl named Raux.

She had once been in the service of the Duchess of Sutherland and thought well of herself. O'Connor paid her constant attention and eventually asked her to marry him.

She did not positively refuse him, but postponed a definite answer.

In the meanwhile O'Connor discovered that she was also receiving attentions from Samuel Manning, an employee of the Great Western railway.

The rivalry continued for quite a while, and between the two men pretty Marie managed to have a pleasant time.

Eventually, however, the girl married Manning.

O'Connor was disappointed, but he took his defeat very philosophically. He was a good-natured man, with a happy disposition, and he continued his friendship with Mr. and Mrs. Manning.

At this stage of the investigation Detective Fox made an important discovery.

It was that on the August evening of the day he disappeared O'Connor had made an engagement to take dinner with the Mannings at their home in Minerva place, Bermondsey.

Two of his friends met him as he was crossing London bridge on his way to keep his appointment. They never afterward saw him alive.

The next move of the detective was to interview Mrs. Manning.

She expressed surprise when told of the disappearance of the gauger, but was quite willing to tell all she knew.

She said he had called at their house on the evening in question, had dined with them and left early.

"We came to the door to say goodby to him," she declared, "and his last words were, 'I will go home now and get a good night's sleep, for I have a hard day's work before me tomorrow.'"

A week later Fox returned to the Manning home and found that it was empty.

He made a thorough search of the premises, and in the cellar noticed that some of the tiling had been moved from the floor.

He dug down into it and found the dead body of Gauger O'Connor.

Then he made a search of O'Connor's rooms and found a package of love letters from Mrs. Manning.

Eventually Mr. and Mrs. Manning were arrested in Edinburgh.

A trial proved that they had jointly murdered O'Connor for his money and both of them were sentenced to death.

First Use of Shrapnel

The shrapnel shell was invented in 1784 by Lieut. Henry Shrapnel, R. A., and was originally called "the spherical case shot." After considerable delay this projectile was adopted by the British government and was apparently first used against the French at the Battle of Rolica, in 1808. In 1852 the British army adopted the name "shrapnel" in honor of its inventor. There have been some changes in shrapnel but the principle is the same.

Petticoat lane, London, was so named in the Seventeenth century when a colony of French weavers was established there. Before that time it was known as Hog lane. From about 1830 it has been known as Middlesex street. It extended north from High street, Whitechapel, to Widegate street, Bishopsgate. For many years it has been a Jewish quarter, and is known chiefly as a second-hand clothing market.—Literary Digest.

Racing Gives Impetus To Fairs And Agriculture

By J. W. MARCHBANK

With the State Fair opening tomorrow, attention is once more directed to the benefits coming to agriculture and kindred pursuits from the racing of the state. There was a time when it looked as though the expositions, not only at Sacramento, but up and down the coast, would have to be discontinued on account of that old bugaboo—lack of funds. With the coming of the thoroughbred sport to Tanforan the picture changed completely. Plenty of money is available.

The pari-mutuel statute wisely enough provides for the diversion of a portion of the commission on the wagering pools for such a worthy purpose as the California State Fair, the specific amount being one hundred thousand dollars. Such fairs as those at Stockton and Pomona also get substantial amounts. In the course of time more shows will take advantage of the provisions of the law, thus extending its benefits.

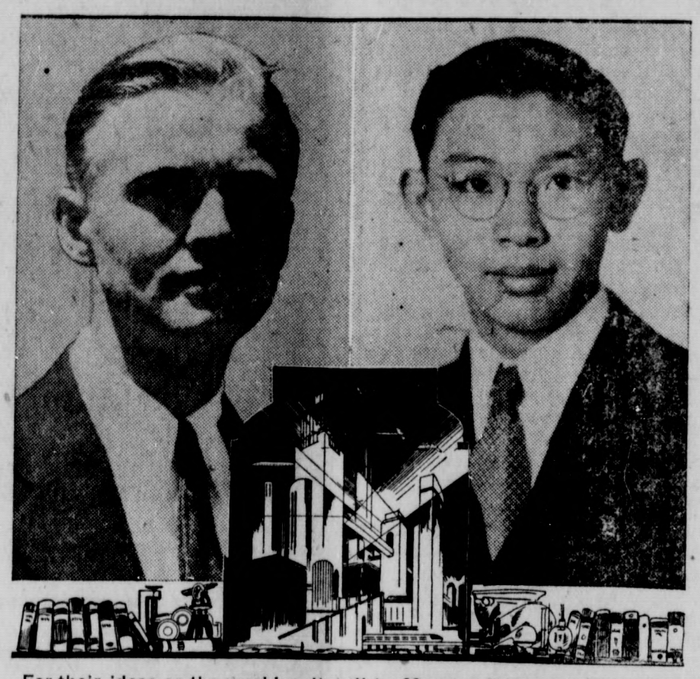
I have long been looking forward to the return of racing on the firm foundation the sport now finds itself, and it is hardly necessary to point out that I have a string at the State Fair in readiness for competition in the features of the eight day race period.

The State Fair is symbolic. As soon as we find it in the condition it should be, and, and as it promises to be with money flowing into the coffers from racing, agriculture will get back into its old place as the basis of the prosperity of our commonwealth.

Sportsmen are highly reasonable and it is on that assumption that relief from the too severe regulations of the present law will be given at the next session of the Legislature. When sportsmen ask for a reduction in the "take" from twelve to nine per cent the lawmakers undoubtedly will recognize that the request was made after the proposition had been reasoned out from every angle and accordingly act favorably on the important matter.

Asked for an illustration of indirect taxation, a bright student suggested the dog tax, "because the dog doesn't pay it."

Young Seers Win College Education



For their ideas on the world as it will be 30 years from now, Dana Adams Schmidt of Los Angeles (left) and Monroe Jang of Marysville have been awarded the two $2,000 University scholarships in Bank of America's statewide essay competition on America's development in the next 30 years. Thousands of young Californians vied for the awards. Schmidt will continue at Pomona College, where he is about to enter his sophomore year, and Jang has elected to attend the University of California.

A Pomona College freshman and a Marysville High School student were announced today as winners of the $2,000 scholarships endowed by Bank of America for the two best essays submitted in a statewide competition in which thousands of boys and girls submitted essays.

In competition with essayists of 18 years or under in Los Angeles County and the San Francisco Bay Area, Dana Adams Schmidt, 18, of 405 West Adams Street, Los Angeles, was awarded a $2,000 scholarship for his essay entitled "The World Thirty Years From Now."

Monroe Jang, 17, son of an American-born Chinese merchant of Marysville, was adjudged the winner for all of California outside the two principal metropolitan areas. His essay on "Economic and Social Advancements" won him more than two dollars a word.

The scholarship competition was sponsored by Bank of America in an endeavour to determine the trend of thought of young Californians, to discover what plans youth holds in store for the future of the United States, and to stimulate constructive thought. Contestants were invited to submit their ideas on "America in 1964" in the form of essays of 1,000 words or less.

The scholarships were awarded by a committee of judges composed of Dr. Robert Gordon Sproul, President of the University of California; Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, President of Leland Stanford Jr. University; and Dr. Rufus B. von KleinSmid, President of the University of Southern California.

The two scholarships will be presented to Jang and Schmidt at the State Fair in Sacramento in the first week of September, by A. P. Giannini, founder of Bank of America and of the Giannini Foundation at the University of California.

In all, Bank of America is making 414 awards in its survey of youthful thought. Essayists whose efforts won the commendation of the judges received a total of $10,000 in scholarships and cash awards.

Young Jang is a product of the California public school system and has already distinguished himself in his school career, having won a high school scholarship offered by the California Scholarship Federation. He has selected the University of California for his Alma Mater and will enter in 1935. His scholarship will be held in trust for him until that time by the bank, and thus through interest accumulation he will actually receive more than $2,000.

Schmidt, who was born in Ohio, received a part of his elementary education in that state. Later he studied abroad, and entered Pomona College in 1933. He plans to use his scholarship to continue his education at that institution. He has chosen journalism as his vocation.

Commenting upon the results of the essay competition, Will F. Morrish, President of Bank of America, said: "The essays were invited as a gauge of the thoughts of the youth of today about the world of tomorrow. The ideas of the young people of today will direct America toward its future, and it is of value to a continuing institution to look to the future.

"The conclusions of the essayists, in the aggregate, offer some interesting deductions. The young people of today are more economically and politically minded than they have been in the past. They are concerned with social problems and are intensely interested in human relationships.

"While they recognize with the cutting clarity of youth the flaws in existing social systems, they are predominantly optimistic about the ability of their generation to solve its problems as they occur. It is encouraging to find that they even foresee an ability on the part of the present adult generation to avert entire chaos.

"The thoughts expressed by the contestants were constructive. There was no communistic doctrine, nor was there radicalism of any sort in abundance. The youth of today is dissatisfied with things as they are, but it is apparent that the desire is for constructive betterment, and not for haphazard change."

SILVER OUTPUT IS IN NEW DECLINE

Production of silver from mines in the United States in July amounted to 1,825,000 fine ounces, the lowest reported since last December, according to the American Bureau of Metal Statistics. Production in June was 2,312,000 ounces, and in July, 1933, 1,552,000 ounces.

Production in Mexico and Canada, which rank with the United States as the largest producers, showed gains.

Preliminary estimates for Mexico show 6,500,000 fine ounces for July, against 6,461,000 in June and 5,100,000 in July a year ago. Canadian output jumped to 1,359,000 fine ounces in July from 963,000 ounces in June and 1,227,000 in July, 1933.

The bureau reports that the curve of American production has been downward since last March.

HOME OWNERS' LOAN CORPR'N. TRANSACTIONS

Member of Federal Home Loan Bank Board Gives Praise for Good Work

Magnitude and scope of the transactions of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation were shown by figures given by Fred W. Catlett, member of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, in an address made the past week to a large gathering of building and loan officials and others in Los Angeles. He praised the work being done by the California management.

Facts presented related to activities of the Corporation both nationwide and in California alone. W. O. Miles, state manager of the corporation, spoke briefly as to conditions in this State.

From the inception of the corporation in 1933 up to August 10, 1934, more than 447,000 loans had been granted throughout the United States for a total of $1,346,000,000, Mr. Catlett stated. Applications numbering 1,601,000, asking for a total of $5,175,000,000, were filed in the period stated, or an average of about $3200.

To handle this vast amount of refinancing, some 30,000 employes were needed, including 9000 lawyers and more than that number of appraisers of all ranks, Mr. Catlett said. The payroll runs about $2,000,000 a month.

Turning to California, it was shown that 88,000 applications for loans, aggregating $271,000,000, had been given initial acceptance in the State in the year or so of the corporation's existence. Three times that number of first requests had been made. More than 22,000 loans had been granted, for a total of $58,000,000.

Not all the money is going out of the corporations' coffers, however, for from within the State between $400,000 and $500,000 had been returned to the corporation by borrowers for installment repayal on the mortgages.

Mr. Catlett, who is in charge of the insurance provisions of the Housing Act passed by Congress some months ago, explained to the building and loan officials that feature of the act, especially in relation to California associations. He replied to numerous questions from the deeply interested audience. Some of the suggestions made will be sent to Washington for furher consideration.

Stereopticon Views in Presbyterian Church

A beautiful set of colored stereopticon pictures will be shown on the screen on Sunday evening at 7:45 in Honor of Bible Sunday, which is being observed in Grace Presbyterian Church, corner of Evergreen and Hanover streets, Sunday night, September 2. Friends are asked to bring their Bibles, which will be placed in front of the pulpit. The pastor, Rev. John R. Stevenson, will designate each Bible with a passage of Scripture having a special significance for the owner of the Bible. Strangers are specially invited.

The ladies' of the Presbyterian Church enjoyed a visit from Mrs. J. P. Cowden, who conducted the Bible study in the absence of Mrs. Fred Roy.

Clogged Fuel Lines

Many cars are disabled on the highways as a result of clogged fuel lines, according to the emergency road service of the California State Automobile Association. Motorists can avoid inconvenience and delay by having the fuel system checked regularly by a service man. The time required is not great and the cost of such inspection is small.

Your last opportunity
TO MAKE THESE SAVINGS ON GAS HEATING EQUIPMENT

SUMMER will soon be gone. Soon fickle fall with a sudden drop in temperature will be here. If you have an old-fashioned heating system this means getting back to the routine of ordering, storing and handling fuel and constant fire tending. And even then perhaps, never getting your house really warm.

Why not stop all this right now and save money? Change to the carefree comfort of Natural Gas heating. By automatic thermostat, by three-heat control or by turning a key you can keep your house at desired, healthful temperature no matter how changeable the weather may be.

Go ahead — make the change now. Why delay when it is so easy to pay for gas heating equipment at this time? It takes only a few hours, for example, to install a Natural Gas burner in your present furnace. Floor furnaces or circulating heaters and other gas heating appliances are likewise quickly and easily installed. Then you and your family are ready to enjoy the convenience of clean, carefree, healthful heating this fall and winter and many winters to come.

Remember, the special 10% Summer Discount on gas heating equipment ends this month. Why not go ahead and order your Natural Gas heating installed today?

COLUMN OF N. R. A. FACTS

INFORMATION regarding the N. R. A. will be furnished each week by W. H. CLAY, Chairman of the local N. R. A. Publicity Committee.

HIGHLIGHTS OF THE WEEK

Blue Eagle Drive in Service Trades: A plan to pledge the 500,000 employers in the nine so-called service trades to abide by the labor provisions of their codes and local trade practice rules has just been initiated by the NRA. The labor provisions cover maximum hours, minimum wages, the ban of child labor and the guarantee of collective bargaining. Each employer will receive through the mail two addressed and franked postcards. One will carry the pledge and, upon its return to Washington, will obtain for the signer his industry Blue Eagle. The other card carries a request for a poster explaining the labor provisions to be hung in the employer's place of business. This will affect millions of employes of barber shops, bowling alleys, billiard halls, shoe repair shops, cleaning and dyeing establishments, hotels, laundries, parking garages, lots and stations, and advertising display installers and literature distributers.

Courts uphold NRA Codes: NRA codes have been upheld by decisions of federal courts in 90 per cent of the cases which so far have come up for adjudication. A survey made public by the NRA Litigation Division lists thirty cases, only three of which were decided adversely to the NRA. The three unfavorable decisions were in cases brought by others against the NRA and in all three appeals have been taken. No adverse decision has been rendered in any action instituted by the NRA, and in only one case decided in favor of the NRA has appeal been taken. Without resort to court action, thirty cases were adjusted in favor of the NRA.

Adjustment of Complaints Speeds On: State NRA directors disposed of 928 complaints of code violations in the fortnight ending August 4. This brought the total handled in a month to 1918. The total adjustments restored $182,000 in back wages to 8167 workers living in all the states and the District of Columbia. The National Labor Relatoins Board has just reported to the President that it is abreast of its work in disposing of cases which could not be adjusted by the Regional Labor Boards and was determined on making rapid disposal of all cases carried to it.

New Industrial Appeals Board Meets: NRA's new Industrial Appeals Board, designed by Administrator Hugh S. Johnson to preside at the "Little Fellows' Forum," met for the first time on August 8. Informality is a feature of the proceedings under this board. The two main requirements are that complaints must be written out and that complainants must show that they have tried to obtain satisfaction through the routine NRA channels.

NRA Has Helped Southern Textile Industry: Ex-Governor O. Max Gardner, North Carolina cotton mill owner, said at a recent public hearing: "The NRA has done more for the textile industry in the South than anything in my day and generation. It has restored and spread employment to such an extent that the old conditions of child labor and the eleven-hour day are ended forever. It has done the finest job of social and economic rehabilitation of any agency in this country."

"It's Code or Chaos!" "Shall we make our code work, or shall we return to pre-code conditions and resulting chaos?" demands the National Automobile Dealers' Association in a bulletin just mailed its members. The President signed the Motor Vehicle Retailing Trade Code last October and most members of the trade have been living up to it, but the chiselers are proving a disturbing element. "No one can gainsay the fact that our code is fundamentally sound," declares the bulletin. "None can ignore the very important benefits already accruing from its operation."

National City Bank Gives Cheering Reports: Profits of $276,563,000 for the first half of this year, as against profits of $86,263,000 for the first half of 1933 before the NRA began to function, are reported by 250 outstanding corporations. The totals are given in the August letter of the National City Bank of New York. Profits, the letter states, would pay 5.7 per cent on the net worth of the concerns; while last year the first-half profits would have paid only 1.7 per cent.

Upward Trend Seen By RFC Chairman: Chairman J. H. Jones believes that better business conditions are indicated by the repayment of 42 per cent of RFC loans. Banks have repaid 64 per cent of their borrowings. Almost six billions have been loaned business concerns.

SOME ANCIENT HAPPENINGS OF CITY REVIEWED

Incidents of Pioneer Days and Characters Recalled For Our Readers

(By An Old-Timer)

The Great 1937 Bridge Fair—The immediate completion of the School Street-Thornton Beach Boulevard, upon which $85,000 of the taxpayers' money was carefully expended by "Good Roads" Jim Casey, followed by the abandonment of the worthy project when that supervisor was defeated, is now a greater matter of far-reaching importance, in benefitting the entire county of San Mateo millions of dollars worth.

There will be glory enough for everybody if every loyal citizen of our splendid county became a busy booster, insisting on speedy action to complete the Thornton Beach boulevard and the improvement of the Thornton Beach Palisades that can be made equally beautiful with the famous New York Palisades and far more beauatiful than the Santa Monica Palisades.

These two undeniably necessary improvements are wonderful in themselves, but they will carry a matter of far greater importance, as incentives toward bringing the Great Fair of 1937 to celebrate the completion of the two greatest bridges in the world, to the Laguna de la Merced.

This spot was the only formidable contender of the Marina for the location of the Panama Pacific International Exposition in 1915. It was the best location by far, but the pull of the money interests was too strong in favor of the Marina. Now that obstacle no longer exists and it is an undeniable fact that the Laguna de la Merced district is far more convenient and desirable for the celebration of the great bridges than it was for the P. P. I. E. in 1915.

Actually, there is not a reasonable argument against the Laguna de la Merced district as the location, while the reasons in favor are unlimited. In the first place, this location is in direct line with the plans that are already under way for marvelous boulevards leading from both bridges, the Golden Gate bridge and the San Francisco-Oakland Bay bridge, to the peninsula via the Bay Shore, El Camino Real, Skyline and Coastside boulevards, on the route to San Mateo, Redwood City, San Mateo, Half Moon Bay, Santa Cruz and Salinas, thence southward via the Coast Route to southern California. Another important favorable argument is that the Laguna de la Merced district would be more accessible to at least four times the number of people than any other location can offer, and that means that that many more of the little fellows—of the forgotten-man class—will be able to see and enjoy an exposition that will rival any great show ever held.

San Francisco knew how to make the P. P. I. E. a success in every repect, and San Francisco knows how to make the Laguna de la Merced Fair parallel that of the P. P. I. E., financially and otherwise.

Therefore, it is up to San Mateo county to take time by the forelock, and finish the Thornton Beach boulevard and by developing the Thornton Beach Palisades.

Old Timer realizes that the foregoing digresses from his real field of action, of relating scenes and incidents of twenty-five years ago; but for those ancient happenings the whole scheme might have changed the conditions that made it possible for us now to enjoy our blessing. Have not old-time pioneers blazed the trails for peace and happiness?

The Record, from the beginning, never overlooked an opportunity to boost the interests of Colma Valley, and that is why the foundation was laid for the present thrifty city. I always contended that San Francisco was rolling over upon us and we could not get away from the inevitable tide of progress. And now, after a quarter of a century, no one could point out the San Francisco-San Mateo county line were it not for the signs—and still we are forging onward.

One of the early issues of The Record contained a picture of President Taft's new 40-horsepower model White Steamer, which was considered too cumbersome and costly, $6000, for practical use, so The Record did not purchase one.

The main line of the Southern Pacific Railway passed through Colma Valley and Ocean View until 1914, when the tunnel was completed on the bay shore for the present main line via South San Francisco and Visitacion.

There being no fire protection, it was suggested that in case of a fire the paper would likely say: "Colma is a mess of ashes."

Jack Bird beat an egg in a game of nigger billiards at Jack Gillan's saloon and Jack worked so hard to quell a fight that he decided to take a two years' vacation.

Bill O'Malley, Tome Haynes, Frank Kelley, Bill Allmon and "Mexican" Joe were special guests at the Eagles' ball.

John Lucke, barkeep at the Nine Mile House, said he was in luck when a daughter arrived—might have been twins.

The new waiting room at the Mission Road entrance of Mount Olivet is nearing completion. The beautiful little building is of the Old Mission type of architecture and is particularly creditable to Superintendent M. Jensen, who is noted for his good taste. A private street car line extended from Mission Road to Mount Olivet.

This is our seventh installment and Old Timer has received no black hand warnings and has not heard of the editor having his pants kicked, and we told you in the beginning what all editors' pants are made for—so we are encouraged to carry on.

THREE MURDERS GIVE AUDIENCES PLENTY OF GASPS

Plot of "The Thin Man" at Daly City Theater

The M-G-M-Cosmopolitan film version of Dashiell Hammett's latest and greatest detective mystery, "The Thin Man," will play at the Daly City Theatre on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, September 3, 4 and 5.

And the best of the screen detectives, William Powell, plays the leading role, with lovely Myrna Loy as his leading lady.

Different from all other detective films, "The Thin Man" is probably the most gripping and exciting picture that has reached the screen recently, yet it teems with sparkling humor and smart dialogue throughout its length.

The story is Nick Charles' story—of a retired detective who is deprived of a pleasure trip to New York on his wealthy wife's money by three baffling murders which he is called upon to solve.

Myrne Loy, as Nora Charles, the wife, for the second time in her life plays a comedy role to perfection, proving that she is one of the most versatile actresses in the picture.

Driven by an airplane propeller, an unusual boat has been devised for use on land or water.

CHRONOLOGY OF SEPTEMBER

Was Originally the Seventh Month, But Changed by Revision of Calendar

"Thirty days hath September, April, June and November" . . . the old rhyme declares.

Many of the months have undergone changes in their number of days, but September has always had thirty days since old Roman times, although it has not always been the ninth month, as it is today. Before the calendar was revised by Julius Caesar it was the seventh month and it derived its name from the Latin word, "septem,' meaning seven. When the position was shifted, in the Julian calendar, to the ninth place in the year, its name remained the same.

The only universal holiday celebrated in September is Labor Day, which in the Canadian provinces and in most of the states of our own country is observed on the first Monday in the month.

In New Orleans Labor Day is celebrated on the fourth Saturday in November and in North Carolina on the first Thursday of September.

Labor Day is not observed as a holiday in Alaska, the Philippines or Porto Rico.

The celebration of Labor Day on the first Monday in September was inaugurated by the Knights of Labor in 1882. Different organizations of workingmen then petitioned for legislation making the day a legal holiday, in various states, and Colorado passed the first law making the day a legal holiday, in 1887. The occasion is marked by general cessation from usual labor, and in many localities by parades, meetings and addresses by prominent labor leaders or others.

Since the Labor Congress in Berlin in 1890, the first of May has been set aside for labor demonstrations in a number of European countries.

September, the transition period between summer and autumn, partakes of the character of both seasons. In the southern part of the United States it is one of the warmest months, and even farther north hot days are not infrequent ,but nights are likely to be cool, and there is often more than a touch of that golden haze which makes the later autumn days so beautiful.

In rural sections it is the harvest period for many crops.

A Canadian poet, Archibald Lampman, portrays in his "September" a beautiful picture of the month in his northern homeland:

"In far-off russet corn fields, where the dry
Gray shocks stand peaked and withering, half concealed;
In the rough earth the orange pumpkins lie,
Full-ribbed; and in the windless pasture field
The sleek red horses o'er the sun-warmed ground
Stand pensively about in companies,
While all around them from the motionless trees
The long, clean shadows sleep without a sound."

Under-Inflated Tires

When the front tires are underinflated there is a possibility that the car will not steer properly, according to the emergency road service of the California State Automobile Association. Underinflated rear tires permit too much side motion or sway and cause discomfort to passengers.

Scrapped Cars

A total of 2,600,000 motor vehicles were scrapped in the United States last year, according to figures by the California Automobile Association.

Distributor Squeak

A squeaking sound while the motor is running may often be traced to the ergency road service of the California distributor shaft, according to the em-State Automibile Association. A little vaseline or similar lubricaant applied to the cam and distributor shaft will usually stop the trouble.

Change Fuel Mixture

The carburetor should be adjusted so as to make the fuel mixture leaner for summer driving than for winter, according to the emergency road service of the California State Automobile Association.

A too rich mixture causes excessive use of fuel and rapid carbonization.

SYNOPSIS

On her way to a faculty position in Lostland Academy, Janet Mercer meets Prof. Arthur Fleming, also on his way to the Academy. At the school the group is struck by an air of mystery pervading the place. Gordon Haskell, proprietor, welcomes them. Wilton Payne completes the Academy faculty. In a schoolroom Janet finds a group which the teachers had supposed were scholars, are wax figures. Haskell explains unusual circumstances connected with the conduct of the Academy. Among the pupils is Berenice Bracebridge, daughter of the late owner of the school. The story of the tragedy of Lostland Academy is that of two sisters and two brothers of Berenice, who lost their lives in the water, at the same moment, some years ago. The wax figures were modeled in the likenesses of the four children, and Doctor Bracebridge's will provided that they must be preserved. Payne learns from Berenice that the uncouth giant whom Janet had seen with Haskell is named Balder, and is a valuable servant.

"Thank you, mother!"

Berenice looked around with a quick smile. "Don't mind Mother Martha. She's old and tired, and she says just what she thinks, like children. She was nurse to all my brothers and sisters."

"All of them," came the quavering voice. "All those little chicks."

"You don't mind if she comes with us? She's like Balder. She doesn't feel any fear of them."

She picked up a small, rose-shaded night lamp, and, holding it a little higher than her head, went on before Payne. The light cast rosy shadows on her white silk dress and down the delicate whiteness of her arm. She wore a blue sash knotted just above her hips. When they came to the foot of the basement stairs she motioned Payne to go on ahead of her. "It's the seventh door to the left."

He began to feel his skin pricking a little, and that unique coldness come into his breast which is a sure accompaniment of fear, yet he endeavored to laugh at his own sensation. What utter folly! He, a grown man, nervous over four wax figures representing four handsome children peacefully at study.

At the door he waited for her, turning his head so as not to look into the circular glass inset. A horrid feeling possessed him that he might see a face on the other side of the glass peering out into the passage! Berenice turned the handle and entered. Her manner seemed to change instantly, and she breathed a sigh of relief.

"Always just before opening the door I think 'perhaps they are gone,' though I know it is a foolish thought—then I see them here quite still and lovely, and I am very content; but the coming here! That's dreadful."

"That hair ribbon on Isabel's head has one end too long," Mother Martha said, and crept across the stone flagging. "Old Mother Martha can tie the ribbon better than that—can't she?" She crooned in an old, weary, but tender voice.

Berenice watched her retie the ribbon, and turned appealing eyes to Payne as if to ask his understanding of the rather pitiful action. In that moment he felt a refreshment of spirit, a receding of barriers, an opening of the paths of the sky, which transmuted the scene into a tableau of enchantment. He had never dreamed that love would come to him suddenly and swiftly, upsetting all his calculations, disturbing the ordered peace of his scholarship.

"She acts as if the old, happy tending of your brothers and sisters was still very real to her."

"Sometimes I think she fancies they are really alive. She is very old—and they all love the past."

"And you are very young. The past should not be allowed to grip you too heavily."

"You do not like these figures!"

"They are beautiful—quite marvelously made. But considering the circumstances—" he hesitated.

"Yes, I know—they seem morbid things. But perhaps my poor father was not wholly well when he drew up his will."

"People are afraid of them—"

"Oh, yes, they are afraid; the school grew emptier and emptier, then stopped, then, after some years, I asked my guardian to have teachers—just for me and the farmers' boys and girls. You see, I wanted the lightning dispersed a little. Oh, Mother Martha, dear—don't you know that sash is quite perfect?"

"Poor children! They ought to go to bed—who's keepin' 'em up?"

"No one, dear. There, sit on the bench; I want to show them more closely."

She held the rose light before each face in turn, oddly lighting her own at the same time, so she was actually a part of that ring of radiance. The elongated shadows leaped up the gray ceiling as if trying to escape. Mother Martha, suddenly sleepy, as happens to the very old, nodded and drew her crimson shawl about her. Berenice put down the lamp. "Shall we sit here a few moments?"

"And may I ask you a question?"

"A dozen."

"Do you like dancing, walking, riding? Would you like us for companions as well as teachers, Miss Mercer—Arthur Fleming and I?"

"Oh, so much! I've been lonely."

"And I wish you'd promise me something—not to come too often to this gloomy basement room."

"Don't make me promise that! There are days when I have this strange fear of the figures—oh, it's like a black oppression, and then I have to come down and reassure myself they are really here, not stealing about the house! How foolish this must sound to you!"

"No! You see, you grew up with the story!"

Payne picked up the lamp. Berenice bent her fair face close to Mother Martha's brown and wrinkled one. "Come, dear; all the little chickens are asleep."

The ancient woman rose obediently. "You must go to sleep, too."

Berenice said: "She likes to tuck me in. She forgets I'm nineteen."

Haskell stood at the end of the passage with a lamp in his hand.

"You were a very long time."

"My fault," said Wilton. "But they are amazingly well done."

"Well done! Too well done! I think I'll put a lock on that door; lock Berenice out of it. She goes there too much."

"Are there photographs of the children in that album upstairs in the drawing room?"

"There's nothing else," Haskell answered impatiently.

"May I look at them?"

"Certainly! Certainly! Let's get done with the subject once for all."

Wilton thanked him and disappeared. Haskell, raising his lamp, looked long and searchingly at Berenice. "Remember, I didn't bring these teachers up here for a mere playtime."

"You are fortunate to get such nice people."

His manner changed. "Berenice, don't look at me that way." His voice

"Poor Children! They Ought to Go to Bed."

sank almost to a whisper. "You know I love you. You can't expect me to be always the formal guardian. I would marry you tomorrow."

"I do not want to be married yet, Gordon. I've seen nothing! I know so little."

"Nothing you could learn could teach you to be lovelier," he said in a voice which had a note in it like reverence mingled with something more of the earth—and cruel in its way.

She started down the passage. Haskell had not followed her, but he held his lamp high until she returned; nor did he ask her where she was going. She went straight to the drawing room, where Payne was bending over the album.

"These photographs are very lovely."

"You won't mind what my guardian says, will you?"

"Certainly not! We must all endeavor to keep the peace."

"And you will not go away, whatever he does?"

"Go away!"

It was as if she had asked him if he would leave the sun road to Arcadia after a long wandering in the wrong paths. "No, I shall not go away."

"There's one thing I'd like to know very much."

"What is it?"

"Why I am always afraid in this house—oh, don't tell me that it is large, gloomy, old. Those things wouldn't make me afraid."

"We'll see—we'll watch—and see," Payne answered gently. "And promise me you won't go to the whirl too much."

"Something draws me there."

"Something will draw you away from there some day—away from these hills, out into life!"

Arthur and Janet were found in quiet contentment by a wood fire, each with a book. "Well, you've seen them," Arthur said as Wilton entered. "What does Hamlet think of them?"

"They recalled Ophelia—the drowning, I suppose! There is a queer aroma in that room, that, old and inky as it is, has naught to do with school books!" Mother Martha retied a hair ribbon. Berenice held a lamp as if it had been a flower; and lit up her waxen kindred. I am going some day to call on Jerry Moore."

CHAPTER IV

—12—

About a week later Wilton was directed by one of his scholars to the Moore farm, and after much climbing he found himself at a five-bar gate which closed the farm lane from the road. The house stood back on a knoll and had a row of thorn locusts before its gray, weather-beaten shingled front. An old man was sawing wood in the bleak house yard. His blue eyes had the childlike expression seen sometimes in the eyes of the old when they have been neither very successful nor important in life. Wilton introduced himself, and after some preliminaries he spoke of the academy and of his new relation to it. The old man seemed at once interested, and ushered him into the warm little kitchen. Having dislodged a sleek gray cat from the rocking chair and shaken out the cushion, he invited his visitor to be seated. Wilton gradually approached the subject of the accident, and remarked: "I believe you were the only witness?"

"I was—the sole and only one. I was walking up the ravine on the other side, an ax on my shoulder, when I heard screams and saw the four clawing at each other and at the air to keep from falling into the whirl! But they was tied together, and over they went. You seen the figures, I suppose?"

"Yes."

"The father, the old professor, took on dreadful—they made them figures to keep him quiet in his long sickness."

"So I understand."

"I ain't never seen 'em myself. Folks do say they're too natural. I ain't never wanted to see 'em! I chopped off a great bough that day—and tried to hold it out over the whirl; but I was on the wrong side, and they couldn't reach it. Then I ran down a piece to cross—current knocked me over twice—and I nearly drowned myself. When I got over that at last, nothin' to be seen but that poisonous black water. I was sick at my stomach. I sat down on a rock and was as sick as a drunkard—just because I hadn't been able to do nothin'. I staggered back to the academy, and the first person I see was Balder hoeing in the garden. 'Balder,' I says, the first thing, "four of 'em—the whole four of 'em—drowned.' Balder let out a screech and threw down his hoe. 'It'll kill the doctor! He's a sick man.'

"Then he went in, and I stood outside shakin' like I had the palsy. Such a screechin' and moanin' and runnin' around. I hear it yet sometimes. Mr. Haskell had been readin' to the doctor all afternoon; and he tried to quiet him, but it was no use. He got worse and worse. Folks said his brain was affected. There's an old lady over to the Herropp farm helped nurse the doctor. She used to say she didn't blame Mrs. Bracebridge for tryin' to bring those children to life in wax—it was enough to wring your heart to hear the poor old professor callin' for 'em. Folks say—" he hesitated. "Folks say the wax figures comes out of that schoolroom and walks the old corridors and look in the library and even go out on the grounds."

"Nonsense!"

"Well, the place has been runnin' down ever since their deaths. 'Twas a queer will—keeping the figures until she's twenty-one. She is a nice lass—brings me a roast chicken or a glass of jell sometimes. She says she's grateful to me for tryin' to save their lives. What's the use of that if I didn't do it. My old dog—Caesar—here she is now—who's that with her?"

Payne looked out the window. "That's her big St. Bernard."

"I didn't mean no dog. I thought I saw a girl in white walking with her." Jerry opened the kitchen door and went out to meet Berenice. "The new teacher's callin' on me," he announced.

She seemed glad to see him, presented her offerings to Jerry—petted the cat. Payne asked if he could go back with her. As they walked along she asked him why he had gone to see Jerry. Taken aback for a moment, he considered how he should answer her.

"I like to talk with all kinds of people," Wilton answered. "Ah, here is the deserted village. Does anyone know why it was deserted?"

"People gave various reasons. The location was too lonely, I suppose."

"The last deserted city I saw was Niufa, in Italy. Imagine a city of towers, churches, palaces, piazzas, utterly empty except for a riot of flowers; deserted since the middle of the Eighteenth century. Why, here comes Miss Mercer and Mr. Fleming."

Janet and Arthur waved to them gaily, came up the rough road with swift eager feet.

"What do you suppose we've discovered—there are tablets in that old church; and one of them is to a Dr. August Lostland, founder of Lostland academy, who died in the year 1799 aged nearly one hundred."

Janet and Berenice had clasped hands on meeting as if their vitality and youth went naturally in search of a comrade. Wilton thought he had never seen two young women who so seemed to heighten each other's beauty. The blue and brown eyes shone with mutual friendliness. Berenice's swaying grace, her etherealized look, the aura of seclusion and isolation surrounding her, blended well with Janet's warmer beauty, its secrets to be revealed in other avenues than the long classic roads of English literature.

"You should be well educated, Miss Bracebridge," Fleming said, "with the four of us always buzzing about."

"I shall be very happy," she answered simply. "Would you like to see the old church, too?" she addressed Wilton.

The old meeting house was built in the Christopher Wren style of architecture, with galleries and a choir loft; the Ten Commandments facing on one side of the pulpit and the Lord's Prayer on the other. The four climbed to the choir loft, and from their position above a circular clock surveyed the high, square pews. As they stood there a figure appeared in the doorway left open at the other end, and Gordon Haskell stepped cautiously over the sill.

"Stand back," Berenice whispered. "I'll lean over the railing. He'll be so surprised." She took off her hat and waited until he was nearly beneath the gallery; then without a word stood by the rail looking down at him. He gazed up at her—grew very white and turned abruptly.

"Guardian," she called, "Don't you know me? It's Berenice!"

Either he did not hear her or did not want to hear her, for he strode out of the building. She turned with a puzzled air. "He saw me—he must have seen me."

Wilton was sure he had seen her; also that he looked like a man thoroughly frightened. Had he mistaken her for some one else?

"I wonder what Mr. Haskell wanted? I don't ever remember seeing him enter this place. He looked at me as if he thought me a ghost. I suppose in this dim light I had a strange appearance. I did not mean to frighten him."

Before she ceased speaking heavy footsteps were heard coming down the staircase of the belfry. "This place seems a kind of Mecca this afternoon," Janet remarked. Arthur and Wilton exchanged glances with an unspoken mutual agreement that to stay just where they were was the thing to do. The footsteps had stopped midway of the descent, and they heard a kind of growling sound, as if a man were angry with some absent individual. Then the footsteps began again, and in the aisle finally appeared the hulking form of Balder. He lurched rather than walked down the aisle, and was out in the air before they had quite recovered themselves.

"My guardian was probably hunting Balder. He often goes up in that tower, Martha says—though how she knows it I don't know, unless Balder tells her. I wonder if he keeps a treasure chest up there?"

Voices reached them. They heard Haskell say: "I've caught you at last—you ruffian."

A growling bass replied: "You are always spying on me—you are! You didn't stay long in the church, did you!"

"Let's see the belfry," Janet said, to divert attention from this conversation.

They began the ascent of the narrow, winding stairs, the men first—Janet and Berenice dodging cobwebs and holding the folds of their skirts from the dust. The almost ladder-like stairs ended at a platform and a closed door. Arthur turned the handle. "Locked. Here, Wilton, we return."

"I wonder if Balder keeps his valuables in here—barring fire, I should think it would be a very safe bank."

"He has no right to lock this door," Berenice said. "The meeting house is no one's property now—unless mine. Mr. Haskell told me once that years ago this village was on the academy land, the inhabitants held ground leases." They stood looking at the closed door for a moment, then Janet turned down. The four walked up the road together in the wild beauty of the sunset, Janet wishing that they could always go on like this—young and hopeful and undisturbed.

Haskell was strolling about the grounds of the academy when they reached them, and stopping to admire the handsome beds of chrysanthemums.

The Grand Canyon

The Grand Canyon of the Colorado is about 217 miles long, and averages twelve miles in width and a mile in depth. The better known and perhaps the most spectacular parts of it are included in Grand Canyon National park.

Rich Fabric's the Thing for Fall

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

ADVANCE fall fashions cause one to think in terms of handsome materials, for it is fine fabrics, we're telling you, which will be making fine costumes this season.

The scheme of things for the new style program runs about like this—a strikingly simple silhouette, with emphasis on the elegance and unusualness of the material whcih fashions it, relying on breathtaking neckwear sets, buttons, buckles and countless other unique gadgets to dramatize the whole.

The big buttons which adorn the newly arrived frocks and wraps so spectacularly are of eye-filling proportions, some of them being simply enormous. It is such bizarre details as these huge buttons which add unlimited swank and distinction to the otherwise modestly styled fall modes.

It does not take long after catching a glimpse of the midseason and early fall styles to realize how strong buttons are going, in the new showings. For example, consider the very good-looking town and country dress to the left in the picture. Buttons all over it! The shirtwaist dress of which this model is a striking exponent, that is styled like a coat with buttons from neckline to hemline down the front and on the pockets, likewise the cuffs, is regarded as one of the most important numbers on the fall fashion program.

It is self-evident that this spectacular use of big buttons does a lot to distinguish this dress, but when it comes to keying enthusiasm to even a higher note, it is the intriguing material which fashions this dress which does just that. This fabric is an entirely new bemberg and wool weave in a radiant brown which is enlivened with a delicate interweaving of glossy yellow-and-gold threads. For daytime and sports you are going to find this bemberg and wool weave the very sort you are looking for.

That big news in regard to the ensemble pictured to the right is its color. The smart checked woolen of which it is made is in tones of green, and green this autumn is scheduled to make a front-stage play. That the dress which is topped with a stunning matched coat, like its companion in the illustration, should show a shirtwaist tendency is not a mere happenstance but rather a natural sequence of events for the shirtwaist idea which prevailed so conspicuously all summer is carrying over into fall with a high and mighty gesture. A brown fabric bag and brown felt slouch hat, go well with this two-tone green check.

There is nothing smarter for immediate wear than a shirtwaist dress of some one or other of the newer lightweight woolens. If the material reflects the glint and gleam of gold and silver, so much the better, for it is the metal-shot fabrics which are getting most of the notice for fall and winter. One way of interpreting the metal note is to see to it that your scarf or your neckpiece and other decorative accessories be fashioned of a metal-touched weave.

We would like to tell you in conclusion that there is a new canton crepe in the market. It works up very happily into practical street costumes.

TRIMMINGS FEATURE FALL SHOE STYLES

There are frills and thrills for the feet—if seeing is believing.

Afternoon dresses of marvelously colored prints are all arustle with frills and ruchings, large and small. Some are of the frock itself, while others stand out in crisp white contrast around both the neckline and the cuffs.

And the new shoes are not to be outdone. They, too, repeat this ruffled theme. The just-out blue and brown kidskin shoes have little butterfly bows, odd trimmings lined with white and knotted coils of stitched and pleated kidskin tabs.

Leather flowers are doing their smart duty several places, too—on plain kidskin pumps, either at the side or in front, and trimming leather and fabric purses, belts, hats and the gauntlet cuffs of gloves.

Some leather bracelets and clips are trimmed with metal and some are even set with stones while others are content to ornament themselves with knots of leather or bits of bead, glass, or straw.

Black Hose to Return to Fashion for Autumn Wear

The latest cry of the fashion prophets is black stockings; not gunmetal ones or bluish-black ones, but plain, ordinary, old-fashioned black stockings.

It's a wild gamble, betting on black stockings, when one remembers how often and how uselessly the very same fashion prophets have heralded the return of curves and long hair.

Black stockings have at least one worthwhile virtue. They make plump ankles and fat legs look slimmer. But it must be admitted they have a strong tendency to make skinny legs look like soda straws.

Picture Hats

The first velvet picture hats have made their appearance at Chantilly, France. Some of them have crowns of sheer tulle or lace.

Cool Shoes

White buckskin shoes with diamond perforations are chic and cool for summer wear.

COLORFUL VELVET

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

The new velvets are conveying a message of color as gay and exotic as ever a rainbow reflected. As the season progresses your eye will be gladdened with such glorified hues as fuchsia, nasturtium, lime green and the new inkberry which is a rich plum tone. Feminine and flattering in color and styling is the wrap of powder blue transparent velvet here pictured. The scarf collar ties in a knot and the elbow sleeves are voluminously full.

Pleated Skirts Popular for All Ages for Fall

Pleated skirts will be important in early fall fashions, according to a stylist, who returned recently from Paris. This also speaks with enthusiasm of velvet bows that are used to trim both daytime and evening dresses, explaining that bows in different colors are substituted to give a change in appearance to the frock.

CHARITY SHOW OF KENNEL CLUB AT TANFORAN

Thoroughbred Dogs Will Be Exhibited for Benefit of American Red Cross

Daly City will be represented by an outstanding entry at the annual open air charity dog show of the San Mateo Kennel Club at the Tanforan Race Course on Sunday, September 2. The show is for the benefit of the American Red Cross.

Mrs. Edwin E. Edelhoff, 6540 Mission street, Daly City, has entered her well known Pomeranians. Mrs. Edelhoff's dogs won best of class at the recent Golden Gate Kennel Club show in San Francisco.

Society leaders and dog fanciers from all parts of the bay region have entered their blue blooded dogs in the show, as well as breeders of show dogs throughout the state.

According to the entry list and the response, it appears that the San Mateo County Chapter of the American Red Cross will be enriched by several dollars as a result of the show.

W. W. Stetthimer is president of the San Mateo Kennel Club and Mrs. W. C. Van Antwerp is vice president. The bench show committee consists of Mervin Rosenbaum, chairman; George Newhall Jr. and Joseph Friedlander Jr.

In addition to the outstanding breeds, there will be special classes for rare breeds and a "children's class" in which the children will be judged for their ability to handle the dogs.

Among the judges are such outstanding dog experts as Dr. H. E. Punchard, of Denver, Colo., who will judge the Terriers and "best of show." Another well known judge will be Lewis H. Starkey, of Pasadena and New York. Among the society leaders who will judge are Mrs. John G. Levison, president of the Junior League in San Francisco, and Mrs. George Newhall Jr.

Baby Rose Marie, one of the youngest of radio stars, could talk when she was thirteen months old, and won her first prize for singing when she was two years old.

SUGGESTS FORMING SPORTSMEN'S CLUB

The need of an organization in Daly City to promote wild life protection and law enforcement is at hand, in the opinion of Arthur J. Bodien, who believes such an organization should be formed here at once.

He believes that inasmuch as San Mateo county is a hunters and fishermen's paradise, an organized effort should be made to protect its wild life and unite those who seek the pleasures of the great outdoors.

It has been suggested by many that a Sportsmen's Club in Daly City would be the answer, and would make those interested in sports better acquainted with each other.

Many things could be accomplished by the formation of such a club, among them being fly and surf casting contests, skeet shoots, fishing excursions and many other amusing things that would be of interest to our local sportsmen.

Mr. Bodien states his only interest in bringing this matter forward is to call together for the first meeting many who have spoken about such a club and also to invite all interested to join in its formation.

Until some other suitable place of meeting can be arranged, Mr. Bodien has called the first meeting to be held at the City Hall, Daly City, on Friday, September 14, at 8:00 p. m. sharp.

Arrest Burglary Suspects

The Shell oil station at Hillside boulevard was entered and robbed on Monday evening about 11 o'clock, the robbery being reported to local police department by Frank Kosta.

Pete Conci, the proprietor, reported that cash, cigarettes, a box of auto lamps and a percolator were stolen.

Two suspects, James Kelley, who gave no address, and James Stafford of 1498 Valencia street were picked up by the San Francisco police, Tuesday night of this week while changing a tire on a car which they had stolen at the General Gas Station at 5698 Mission street.

The men were booked at the San Francisco police station and are being held for the local police in connection with the Daly City gas station robbery.

Kelley and Stafford are suspected of being the same men who perpetrated the robbery of the gas stataion in this city, which occurred only about an hour before they were arrested in San Francisco.

EASY MONEY?

An Oakland bank recently installed a chute leading from the street to an underground vault, which enables customers to make deposits outside of banking hours.

HOUSING PLANS ARE DISCUSSED BY WESTERN BANKS

Meeting of Representatives For Purpose of Working Out New Program

Representatives of the American Bankers Association and the National Emergency Council met recently at the Palace Hotel to work out plans for handling, in the West, the billion-dollar home modernization program of the Federal Housing Administration.

Officials of banking associations in seven Western States participated in the conference.

Speaking in behalf of the bankers in this State, Andrew Miller, secretary of the California Bankers Association, said:

"The banks are anxious to help in every way possible and we believe the home modernization loan setup is a fine program."

Hearty cooperation also was promised by Clifford A. Anglim, district director of the FHA for Northern California.

Under the program, loans will be made to improve and modernize property up to $2,000.

Under the terms of the loans, which are payable in one, two and three years, the borrower must have an income of five times the service charge, which will be $5 per hundred on the loan.

Domenic Garibaldi Passes

Domenic Garibaldi, former pioneer resident of Colma, passed away in San Francisco on Wednesday of this week.

He is survived by his widoy, Mrs. Louisa Garibaldi; three sons—Joseph, John and Frank Garibaldi; a daughter, Mrs. Albina Volkman; and four brothers—John, Antone, Carlo and Biago Garibaldi, and by a sister, Mrs. Theresa Malatesta.

Mr. Garibaldi was a native of Italy, and was in his sixty-eighth year at the time of his demise.

Funeral services will be held Saturday of this week, with entombment in the Italian Cemetery. A requiem high mass will be celebrated for the repose of his soul in Holy Angels Church, Colma, Saturday morning.

An unusual accomplishment is that of Mrs. Caroline Miller of Baxley, Ga., whose first novel, "Lamb in His Bosom" was recently awarded the coveted Pultizer prize for 1933. Mrs. Miller is thirty years old, never went to college, and is the mother of three sons, two of them twins. Her husband is superintendent of schools at Baxley.

MOTHERS TO BEGIN YEAR ON CAMPUS

In order that it may do its share in university activities, the University of California Mothers Club began its work this week, when members attended the first meeting of the semester to welcome the mothers of freshman students and all other new students.

Dr. Louise Hector, who took over the duties of club president for the second consecutive year, called the meeting to order at 2 p. m., Tuesday, in Senior Women's Hall on the University campus. New members were introduced at that time to the officers for the coming year.

A resume of the club's activities was given in order that new members might become acquainted with the club's place in campus life. In the future, as in the past, the Mothers Club will conduct a student loan fund, through which loans are made to students on a character basis rather than on one of scholarship.

Last year's Saturday night "mixers," where all students were invited to attend an informal evening of entertainment, will be continued.

Hospital visitattions also will continue.

Weekly meetings of the club will be held every Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Clarita Tan Kiang, of Manila, was chosen recently as the reigning "Queen of Beauty" of the Philippine Islands, to preside over the forthcoming carnival at Manila.

AMERICAN LEGION AUXILIARY NOTES

(By G. J. H.)

A large delegation of members attended the installation of officers of San Bruno Unit No. 409 on last Thursday evening. Several members also attended the installation held in Burlingame by Burlingame Unit No. 163 on Monday evening. District President Catherine Foreman was the installing officer and members of the San Mateo County Council Drill Team assisted . The same team will assist tonight , Friday, August, 31, for the San Mateo Unit No 82.

Plans are under way for a Past Presidents and Past Commanders Banquet to be held in the near future honoring those who have served this Post and Unit since it's inception.

The Eighth District is honored this year in having Mrs. Florence Chess of San Mateo Unit No. 82 appointed Poppy Chairman for the Department of California. We feel sure this activity will be a great success as the ability of Mrs. Chess has been shown many times before in the work of the American Legion Auxiliary.

The regular meeting of this Unit will be held on Wednesday evening, September 5, at 8:30 p. m. All members be sure to attend as final arrangements will be made for the installation of officiers which will be held on Thursday evening, September 20.

Kept in an incubator for six weeks after birth because he weighed only four pounds, Franklin Max Bullimore, one year old, of St. Joseph, Mo., recently won a blue ribbon as the most perfect baby in a contest there.
